

150 Years: Remembering Worst Civil War Battle On Missouri Soil

Over the next few weeks, the Shelby County Herald will be remembering the horrific Centralia Battle in which many Shelby County men lost their lives. On September 13 and 14, there will be a reenactment of the battle in Centralia. More information can be found at www.centraliabattlefield.com/reenactment.

The terrible massacre that happened during the Civil War in Centralia in 1864 seems so long ago, but if one can imagine what it is like to lose someone they care about, it can bring them closer to this time. In our world today, there are many great men and women who have sacrificed their lives and continue to make many sacrifices for our country. It was no different in 1864. These men received a $100 bounty for their service, but that would certainly not ease the pain of losing someone you love.

One Shelby County resident not only lost one person she loved dearly, but two. Harriett Matteson, from the Clarence area, lost her husband Charles Matteson and her son, Charles M. Jenkins.

As you read this, imagine a 17 year old boy, small stature at 5' 3" with blue eyes, light colored hair and a light complexion. This is the description of Harriett's son, Charles M. Jenkins. He enlisted on August 27, 1864 for three years, but only served as a private for 32 days before being killed in Centralia.

Harriett's husband, Charles was 44 years old and a farmer. He enlisted on August 10, 1864 and lost his life at Centralia after serving as a private for 49 days. He was described as having blue eyes, dark hair and light complexion. He was 5' 9" tall.

The pain Harriett must have felt can not be grasped or explained in words. She died on April 20, 1902, but even through all she went through, her faith and her standing in the community was strong. An article in the Clarence Courier mentioned her death and had this to say about her, "Deceased was one of the oldest citizens of our city, and one of the best and most highly respected ladies of the community. She was a devoted member of the M. E. Church and possessed a true motherly

Christian character."

One of Charles and Harriett's other sons, James Henry Matteson was born in Clarence on February 14, 1862 and would have been two when his father was taken from him. According to his obituary in the June 24, 1925 Clarence Courier, he grew up in the community of Clarence and in 1883 he married Miss Luzzetta Culver, a Clarence resident. They had four children.

It also stated that the professed religion and joined the M. E. church in Clarence when but a young man, and soon became very active in the work of the church. He took special interest in the Sunday school work serving in the capacity as assistant superintendent for some ten or twelve years, and also being a teacher in the Sunday school for practically all the time he was connected with it.

Through Harriett's suffering and loss of two very special people, she must have had the resolve to raise her other children in a respectable and Godly manner.

Children who never met their father

When many of the men enlisted their wife's were expecting. Depending on when these men left their homes, they may have never met their child before they were killed in Centralia.

James Etta Stalcup was born on September 17, 1864 to Mary Ann nee Byars and James Stalcup.

Caroline Donahoo was born September 18, 1864 to Minerva. Her father was John Donahoo. Anna Harding was born on August 7, 1864 to Sarah nee Carothers. Her father was John W. Harding.

Laura Casey was born September 1, 1864.

The following children were born after the battle and never met their father.

Margaret Drennan was born on January 13, 1865 to Lucinda.
